Access to History: From Autocracy to Communism: Russia 1894-1941 Hachette UK
The Access to History series is the most popular and trusted series for AS and A level history students. This title focuses on Russia in the period from 1894-1941. It begins with the situation in Russia under Tsar Nicholas II and then goes on to examine the causes and effects of the 1905 and 1917 revolutions, the Bolshevik struggle to gain power, and the eventual rise of Stalin. The political, economic and social developments through this period and the effects of these are explored and analysed throughout. Throughout the book, key dates, terms and issues are highlighted, and historical interpretations of key debates are outlined. Summary diagrams are included to consolidate knowledge and understanding of the period, and exam-style questions and tips written by an examiner for the OCR specification provide the opportunity to develop exam skills.
The Jew Accused Three Anti-Semitic Affairs (Dreyfus, Beilis, Frank) 1894-1915 Cambridge University Press Three Jews--Alfred Dreyfus, Mendel Beilis, and Leo Frank--were charged with heinous crimes in the generation before World War I--Dreyfus of treason in France, Beilis of ritual murder in Russia, and Frank of the murder of a young girl in the United States. The affairs that developed out of their trials pulled hundreds of thousands of people into passionate confrontation. Quite aside from the lurid details and sensational charges, larger issues emerged, among them the power of modern anti-Semitism, the sometimes tragic conflict between the freedom of the press and the protection of individual rights, the unpredictable reactions of individuals when subjected to extreme situations, and the inevitable ambiguities of campaigns for truth and justice when political advantage is to be gained from them. This study explores the nature of modern anti-Semitism and the ways that politicians in the generation before World War I attempted to use hatred of Jews as a political device to mobilize the masses. The anti-Semitism surrounding the affairs is presented as an elusive intermingling of real conflict between Jews and non-Jews, on the one hand, and, on the other, fantasies about Jews derived from powerful myths deeply rooted in Western civilization. In attempting to untangle myth and reality and to offer a fresh look at the main personalities in the affairs many surprises emerge; heroes appear less heroic and villains less villainous, while real factors appear more important than most accounts of the affairs have recognized. The Beginnings Of The Cinema In England, 1894-1901: Volume 2 1897 University of Exeter Press Describing in detail one of the most inventive periods in the history of English cinema, the volumes in this celebrated series are already established as classics in their field. Each volume details the highlights of a single cinematic year, including details of production, manufacturers of equipment, dealers and exhibitors. This is augmented by numerous carefully chosen illustrations and a comprehensive filmography of English films, fiction and non-fiction, for the year. Volume 2 details how by 1897 on-screen movement was no longer enough to hold the attention of the public. Film makers were beginning to look for other means to widen the appeal of the moving image, including employing lecturers to accompany the shows and filming newsworthy events. Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee procession through London was one of the first of these events. Almost every major and minor film producer in England covered it. These types of films can be seen as the forerunners of the newsreels of the 1920s and 1930s. Barnes was awarded the Jean Mitry Prize for a life-long contribution to film in 1998. Describing in detail one of the most inventive periods in the history of English cinema, the volumes in this celebrated series are already established as classics in their field and represent a major contribution to international film studies. Lancashire Sea-Fisheries Laboratory at the University of Liverpool This, the Third Annual Report of the Lancashire Sea Fisheries Laboratory, contains an account of the work done during the past year, 1894, in endeavouring to carry out the scheme of investigations drawn up by Prof. Herdman when the Laboratory was established in 1892, and is necessarily, to a considerable extent, a continuation of what has already been published in the two former Reports. One new line of enquiry this year is the investigation, by means of drift bottles, Of the tidal and other currents in the Irish Sea, which would affect the distribution Of small floating bodies, such as fish eggs and surface food (see below). Part of the work has been carried out on board the fisheries steamer John Fell, while making the usual periodical visits to the in-shore and off-shore fishing grounds Of the district and adjacent parts Of the Irish Sea. The fishery officers, under the Committee, have kept us supplied with material from their respective districts. Owing to the resignation of two fishery Officers, this part of the work has been somewhat interrupted during the latter part of the year, and, consequently, the number of small fish sent in for examination has been rather less than in former years. This reduction in the number of fish is, however, counterbalanced by a great increase in the number of shell fish, La, cockles and mussels, sent in, as will be Observed from the statistics later on in this report. The rest Of the work, including the microscopical exam imation of the fish and shell-fish stomachs and eggs, has been done in the Fisheries Laboratory at University College, Liverpool. In March, 1894, Mr. Andrew Scott succeeded Mr. Corbin as Fisheries Assistant, and the detailed work during the year has been carried out by Mr. Scott, under the general direction of Prof. Herdman, as in former years. The Robert Wright memoirs are an interesting and sometimes humorous window into the life of the European pioneers of Northern Rhodesia and the British East African Protectorate from 1894 to 1904. Robert and his brother David were initially employed as coffee farmers in the Blantyre district. Their sense of adventure soon led them to start a business hunting trophy animals and trading for ivory and rubber from Lake Tanganyika to the Katanga province of the Congo. Robert was a keen photographer and fortunately many of his photographs have survived and are included in this book. The Correspondence of Karl Heinrich Ulrichs, 1846-1894 Springer Nature This book will be the first critical edition of all the surviving correspondence to, from and about Karl Heinrich Ulrichs between 1846 and 1894. Ulrichs, a former Hanoverian lawyer, was the first to articulate a personal identity of sexuality that defined individuals by their sexual object. This articulation of sexual modernist identities is Ulrichs' abiding legacy to the world. He wrote twelve short books between 1864 and 1879, arguing for the removal of laws and prejudice against 'urnings' and articulating a scientific theory that placed them as a third gender. He is a foundational figure in the history of sexuality, yet there has never been an edition of his complete correspondence in either English or the original German. The correspondence between the years of 1846 and 1894 covers three definable periods: the years before Ulrichs began writing (1846-1864); the years between which all his principle works, his lobbying and all his activism took place (1865-1879); and his final years in exile (1880-1895). The analysis will contend that the correspondence reveals that Ulrichs' project was not just a lonely campaign against legal prohibition of the 'hydra of public contempt', but instead was part of a far wider campaign of community-led self-definition that was actively promoted at home and abroad. The Edinburgh Review, Or Critical Journal, Vol. 179 For January, 1894 April, 1894; To Be Continued Quarterly (Classic Reprint) Forgotten Books Excerpt from The Edinburgh Review, or Critical Journal, Vol. 179: For January, 1894 April, 1894; To Be Continued Quarterly Talleyrand was desirous, above all things, I have said so already, to become again necessary and indispensable, and for this purpose it was expedient that every means of resistance to the projects of invasion and to the ideas of domination in Germany entertained by his master should not be overcome. Besides, M. De Talleyrand served his turn in a most advantageous way in his dealings with Austria; the treaties that paid him best were those he negotiated with that Power; he owed to them the greatest part of his fortune, for the Cabinet of Vienna knew, as well as any other, how to make the sacrifices required.' Radnorshire was Welsh two hundred years ago; now Welsh is not spoken in it at all. Herefordshire, three hundred years ago, was largely Welsh-speaking; even from the valley of the Honddu Welsh has retreated, as a widow told me some years ago, telling me at the same time that her husband was the last man who could speak Welsh and play the harp in that valley. I saw the harp, with all its strings broken. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Our aim is to provide readers with the highest quality reproductions of fiction and non-fiction literature that has stood the test of time. It is highly unlikely that this would occur with one of our books. Our extensive quality control ensures that the readers of Trieste Publishing's books will be delighted with their purchase. Our staff has thoroughly reviewed every page of all the books in the collection, repairing, or if necessary, rejecting titles that are not of the highest quality. This process ensures that the reader of one of Trieste Publishing's titles receives a volume that faithfully reproduces the original, and to the maximum degree possible, gives them the experience of owning the original work. We pride ourselves on not only creating a pathway to an extensive reservoir of books of the finest quality, but also providing value to every one of our readers. Excerpt from Macmillan's Magazine, Vol. 70: May, 1894, to October, 1894 That same shrove-tuesday (and it is well to mark the day, because Master Hill was so superior to dates) this man, who asserted the dignity of our race by not allowing matter to disturb him, was coming down hill with his heavy drag on, in a road that was soft from the goodness Of the soil, when a man with two legs made of better stufi than ours, either came out of a gate across the van, or else fairly walked it down by superior speed behind. Ship ahoy he shouted and Old Hill was wide awake, for he had two or three barrels that would keep rolling into the small of his back (as he called it, with his usual Oblivion Of chronology), and so he was enabled to discern this man, and begin at his leisure to consider him. If the man had shouted again, or shown any other symptom Of small hurry, the driver (or properly speak ing the drifter, for the horses did their own driving,) would have felt some disappointment in him as an inferior fellow-creature. But the man on foot, or at least on stumps, was in no more hurry than old Hill himself, and steadfastly trudged to the bottom of the hill, looking only at the horses.
